P for Protection:

One of our most important tasks is to protect the genuineness and integrity of philately

Credibility – for everyone

Inexpensive fake stamps are expensive for the whole industry

Peter, age 6 and aspiring collector, bought a new stamp for his collection. The stamp was a forgery, but Peter didn't know. Peter showed his newest acquisition to his uncle Bent, a renowned philatelist. Bent never dreamed that Peter could have bought a fake, and complimented the boy on his fine collection. Years later, Peter has an extensive collection, and wishes to participate in an exhibition with his stamps. An official at the exhibition discovers the fake stamp in Peter's collection, and he is discredited and banned from exhibitions.

How does this concern me?

Fake inexpensive stamps:

- Cause a direct economical loss for postal services
- Undermine the credibility, image and integrity of philately → No new collectors → causes an indirect economical loss for postal services

Everybody has a responsibility

What can YOU do?

UPU

Need to immediately publicise all knowledge of fake and forged stamps to the WAD(P)P

This enables WNS to directly notify users of their website

WAD(P)P

When receiving information from UPU, WAD(P)P should immediately forward it to all members of the association

FIP

Is responsible for the further distribution of knowledge

Member countries → philatelic publications and magazines → the individual collector

AIJP

Must ensure that information about fakes and forgeries reach both their members and a broader public audience

ASCAT

Have a duty to inform buyers
(based on info from UPU/WNS)

!"Forged Stamps Exist"!
Notification in catalogues

ASCAT

IFSDA

Must warn collectors about fakes.

Should - like ASCAT - label forged stamps and items, so that no forged material is sold as genuine.

Should keep themselves informed

INTERGRAF

Intergraf

The more knowledge of the ways of forgeries, the better the prevention.

By developing increasingly forgery-proof security systems, Intergraf can greatly contribute to the prevention (and discovery) of forgeries.

FFE

Readers: philatelists all over the world

Content: Mainly philatelic studies of older manipulations or forgeries on a high professional level

BUT: also new forgeries – we are glad to present interesting new knowledge of present day forged stamps

Our interest in this subject is to increase the general focus on fakes and forgeries, and thereby also an increase in philatelic research

FAKES FORGERIES EXPERTS

WORST CASE SCENARIO

Collectors stop being interested in philately, because of the lost credibility and bad image of the hobby.

This means a massive loss of collectors and philatelist alike, which in turn significantly reduces the number philatelic clubs in the FIP member countries, give fewer collectors for IFSDA and ASCAT, fewer readers for AIJP, and for UPU: the non-collecting citizen does not require 30 different stamp editions per year.

Conclusion

WE NEED TO DO SOMETHING NOW!

If all of the above mentioned associations follow the recommended actions, we can protect the integrity of stamps and again make philately the Worlds Best Hobby
